

Brick Times

Volume 1, Issue 1

2004

Points of Interest

- Scotty says there's trouble
- Brickfest 2004 coming soon
- "MMMM" is "OK"
- Don't Piss Off Bluntman
- "Cold Comfort" out in the Cold
-

Inside this issue:

Visit Brickfilms.com	2
Brickfest 2004	2
Missing Moon Mission Movies Discovered	2
Revmen Rocks	2
City Council Meeting	4
Child wonders "Are We There Yet"	5
Visit Protowrxx.com	6

Factory in Trouble!

The Brock Brick Factory is apparently having problems since the recent buyout. Mr. Brock, the Factory's previous owner who recently retired and sold the facility, could not be reached for comment as he was out for a drive in his 'Brickchetta', but 'Scotty', a local factory worker, reports things are not right at the factory.

He reports that the local manager, BrickO, is making changes that he 'shouldn't be a do in'. Scotty says they are firing people left and right and they've even changed the color of some of the bricks since Mr. Brock left.

When confronted with this information, BrickO merely explained that he was 'Doing what his was told' by his boss the notorious "MB" was directing the recent changes at the factory. "MB" couldn't be reached for comment and did not return our calls. Since he apparently is living "off shore", we could not try to locate "MB" in person.

One thing is for sure something needs to be done to help insure we do not continue to lose jobs at the Factory since it has a very large economic impact for the local Brickville community.

With nearly fifty percent of the local fig population employed by the Factory, it could be devastating if the Factory were to close in these uncertain times.

We sincerely hope that someone can help get things back in line at the Factory before it's too late. We understand the issue may be discussed at the next City Council meeting.

The Brick Times will continue to keep you posted on the changes and the factory.

Chef Wars Update

We have it on high authority that a new edition of the infamous 'Chef Wars' show will be returning to the local cinema in the near future.

The show, featuring Chefs from around the world doing their best to outdo each other in spatula to spatula competition, has been put on hold for some time now and the Brick Times is happy to announce the new show should be airing later this year.

We understand the latest edition will be featuring the great Chef Jacques from France against that wacky Chef from Australia which still doesn't have a name. Be sure and check in at Protowrxx. Brickfilms.com soon.

Missing Moon Mission Movies Discovered!

Recently unearthed from the Moon Mission archives of the 1960's and 1970's, a hilarious look at the 'missing clips' from the American mission to the moon is now available for viewing.

The "Mission Moon Mission Movies", as they are known, or simply "MMMM", take a look at the film and video clips that the American Space Agency failed to make available to the public.

MMMM

Having viewed these clips, I do indeed realize why the agency never released them for public viewing.

With the renewed interest in the Moon and beyond, we are sure you will enjoy a look back at the problems encountered during the first Moon missions.

With rare footage and funny outtakes, "MMMM" takes us on a sometimes humorous trip to the past.

Who knows, maybe the latest endeavors to the Moon and beyond will leave behind yet another archive of un seen clips that some future generation will be laughing at thirty years from now.

"MMMM" can be see in Protowrxxs.com brickfilms area.

Revmen Rocks!

Yes, Revmen Rocks. You heard it, you've seen it and now it's in print so it must be true.

Revmen, aka Josh Leisure, current keeper of the fire at Brickfilms.com, and director of some mighty fine brickfilms himself, does indeed rock. But, just to make sure, here's the rest of the story.

Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!

Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks!

Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!

Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!
 Revmen Rocks! Revmen Rocks!

*Oh.. Yes.. One more thing
 Revmen Rocks*

Fredtabulous and Georgeous Rescued

Fredtabulous and Georgeous, the local Brickville anti-heros, had to be rescued once again during one of their rescue missions.

Seems the "dorky duo", as they are known around these parts, ended up getting themselves

Scene from the Fred and Grouge Rescue hung out to dry, so to speak, while flying between some buildings in New York City.

With Georgeous in the lead and Fredtabulous right behind, Georgeous was side tracked by the mirror windows on one of the larger buildings, checked his hair, and didn't see the clothes line up ahead between some apartment buildings.

Although no real super heros were required to rescue the pair, a local homemaker managed to wring the two in along with her laundry and help them down.

Visit Brickfilms.com Today

If you haven't found it already, THE home of all stop motion animated brick movies on the Internet and beyond is Brickfilms.com. Brickfilms.com, currently run by Josh Leisure, host several hundred animated brick movies by nearly as many directors and animators.

Brickfilms.com—THE home of animated bricks...

With over 1000 members and a constant stream of new users signing up, the site continues to be the hot spot of stop mo animation on the net.

The forums are informative and fun, the chat additive, and the 'noobs' totally hilarious. One thing you need to know if you are interested in brick filming is to READ THE FAQ... or else.

Otherwise you'll get shot down in flames or even end up being the victim of a Fight Club clip yourself as some noobs have learned.

So children.. And adults.. Read the FAQ, read the resources, and read, read, read before posting that stupid question on how do I turn on a light.

With that being said, don't miss out on the fun at Brickfilms.com and drop by and sign up today.

Disclaimer:

Note that you have been warned that you shouldn't ask stupid questions without having tried to find the answer yourself first. If you insist on being the noob that nobody likes, just remember, you were warned. Oh yes, and remember... Don't piss off Bluntman.

Brickfest 2004

Well the High Adventure Theater (HAT for short) contest deadline is over and all the films are in. Err.. Or at least all that made the deadline.

Anyhow, now the count down begins to Brickfest 2004 where a hand picked selection of the HAT entries will be shown to a special Brickfest audience.

Will the Factory Fix coverage make it to Brickfest? Who will be the lucky few that have their creation of hours and hours of work and creativity featured during this huge convention?

Only the few, the proud, the dummies who have volunteered to help weed them out know for sure. In any manner the HAT submissions were very entertaining and very fun to watch. Congrates to all those that entered, winners or not, they accomplished something many other brickfilers did not.

*"The highlight of this years
Brickfest will be the animation showcase for sure" - brickfilmer*

The City Council Meeting—Ha Ha!

Well the Brickville City Council met again last night and as usual the meeting was quite humorous.

Between the pure greed, the confusion, and the snoring, very little business actually took place.. As usual.

Brickville City Council—A laugh every agenda item

We would think they would finally learn how to actually accomplish something during these meetings but apparently that is too difficult to do.

Once again the members managed to continue the confusion and waste our hard earned brickbucks.

Watch for full coverage video coverage in the upcoming City Council Meeting movie coming soon from Protowrxxs. See the Brickville Council at work... and laugh at them.

THE BRICK TIMES

1 Brick Lane
Brickville BK 12345

Phone: 555-555-5555
Fax: 555-555-5555
Email: lego@stephennolen.com

The key to getting things done

Sometimes

We sincerely hope you have enjoyed this edition of the Brick Times. Be sure and watch The Factory Fix, the Mission Moon Mission Movies, the Missing Moon Mission Movies and Are We There Yet to make any sense out of anything in this issue.

Also really check out www.BrickFilms.com for more brickfilms adventures and <http://Protowrxs.BrickFilms.com> for more information to any references here.

-Editor dude

Now Showing: Are We There Yet?

That is the question. Are We There Yet?

It's a good question, with a simple answer. Well maybe not. Apparently there is a lot more to this simple question than meets the eye.. Or.. I guess the ear that is.

Although the question is asked day in and day out, it appears that the true answer has not been provided to the millions of kids asking it.

This question eventually gets answered in this short film by the Protowrxs group.

Set to some beautiful music with some actual animation, Are We There Yet manages to entertain, at least for a little while.

No wonderful special effects, no Star Wars like light sabers fights, no flying mini figs, but somehow, somewhere, for some reason, and for some people, it is entertaining.

So power up, login, click out, buckle up, and go for the ride and see if we are really there yet or not.

The full version of Are We There Yet can be found on the Protowrxs films web site at <http://Protowrxs.Brickfilms.com>.

Are We There Yet?

Editors Note:

This paper may contain fictitious and untruthful comments, misleading information, and other deceitful content that we simply just didn't know was there.

We, the editor of the Brick Times, take no responsibility at all for any of the content within the edition even though we wrote all of it.

The Brick Times reserves the right to change any story, any time, without further notice to the end reader.

There may be an upgrade cost associated with any changes we may make to this paper.